The power to reach. The power to dream. The power to build, uplift and create. The power to move the immovable, to align our reality to the best of our ideals. That is the power of we. We know that change doesn’t happen in silos. From our beginning, The Chicago Community Trust has understood that more voices, more minds, more hearts are better than one. It is our collective actions, ideas and generosity that propel us forward together. We find strength in our differences, common ground in our unparalleled love for our region. We take courage knowing that any challenge we face, we face as one. We draw power from our shared purpose, power that renews and emboldens us on our journey – the world-changing power of we.

Helene D. Gayle
President and CEO
The leadership of Terry Mazany is defined by how he elevated the expectations of what a community foundation can do.

In everything from asset growth to dollars granted, from community visibility to a greater focus on inclusivity, the Trust’s reach was amplified through his insight and tireless efforts. During Terry’s 13 years as president and CEO, the dollar value of annual grants originating at the Trust more than tripled—enabling us to do more good for Chicago.

Early in Terry’s tenure, board member Sue Gin clued him into the widely held view that the Trust was a “sleeping giant,” with unrealized potential for impact. She was clear that if the Trust continued on its current path, it would become increasingly insignificant to Chicago.

“Armed with this ambition, we began to redesign the Trust for elevated stature,” Terry later recalled. Key to this change was to shift the mindset of the foundation from a receiver of funds to a fundraiser—a prerequisite for the Trust’s centennial endowment building campaign, We Are Chicago. With leadership from former Executive Committee member Marshall Field V, as well as John Bryan, King
Harris and Shawn Donnelley, this shift in focus achieved a profound new level of long-term impact that will endure beyond the staff and board serving today.

In navigating the path to the Trust’s 100-year milestone, Mazany gathered the Trust’s forces in new ways that redefined success. With its audacious goal of $1 billion, the campaign topped out at $1.6 billion—a triumph of philanthropic engagement for the Trust that became a model for community foundations nationwide.

More importantly, the campaign stimulated a heightened awareness of the Trust and contributed to a steady increase of annual contributions, up to over $300 million a year from an average of under $100 million. As assets grew, and grants amplified, so did the Trust’s capacity to play a leadership role in the civic life of the region, championing the interests of those with the least.

In the face of complex and daunting challenges, connection and collaboration at every level are essential strategies. Terry’s work to expand philanthropy included a surge in identity-focused funds, which unite individuals and families in charitable giving inspired by a shared heritage or a common cause.

It was also during Terry’s leadership that the Trust reached out to everyone in our region, welcoming each of us to take a seat at the table where social challenges are candidly shared, deeply understood and tackled with compassion and ingenuity. On the Table quickly became an unofficial civic holiday, a legacy of Terry’s commitment to collaboration that continues today.

“We have worked hard to generate the resources and the insights that will help us determine the right way to push forward,” Terry once wrote. And his leadership pushed us closer to the ideals of equity, inclusive growth, shared prosperity, vibrant democracy and tangible improvements in the social, physical and natural environments of our entire region.

True leaders elevate the stature of what they lead. For Terry Mazany’s extraordinary contributions to the reputation, health and culture of the Trust, and for his enduring effect on the place we call home, we will remain forever grateful.

“I don’t know how to get people to care about issues that don’t directly affect them, unless you get them to feel it.”

Deana Haggag, president and chief executive officer of United States Artists, grew up in a family of scientists. But she believes passionately that the arts hold the power to change lives and transform our world.

“I don’t know how to imagine civilized society without artists,” Haggag says. “I don’t know how to get people to care about issues that don’t directly affect them, unless you get them to feel it.”

According to a study by the Urban Institute, 96% of Americans value art in their lives—yet only 27% value the artists who produce it. And after funding cuts at the National Endowment for the Arts prompted the agency to eliminate grants to individual artists, a group of philanthropic leaders joined forces to elevate the value of artists, and address the funding gap.

“Our founders saw those cuts as a loss for American society,” Haggag says. “They thought it was really important to make that investment in individual artists.”
Since its creation in 2006, United States Artists (USA) has supported more than 500 artists with grants totaling upwards of $25 million. As its philanthropic partner, The Chicago Community Trust houses and invests USA’s endowment to maximize its income.

“The Trust takes very good care of our money,” Haggag says. “There’s a lot of natural alignment between our mission and our goals here at USA, and what the Trust is interested in doing for the city of Chicago.”

From Haggag’s office high above Oak Street Beach, the hunt begins each year for up to 50 “amazing” artists from anywhere in the country, working in one of 10 arts areas: from architecture and design, to music, theater and performance.

Fellowship recipients have ranged in age from their 20s to their 90s, “from every walk of life, every race, every religion, every leaning.”

Previous USA Fellows have included Barry Jenkins, four years before his film Moonlight won the 2016 Academy Award for Best Picture; playwright Annie Baker, whose play The Flick won the Pulitzer Prize three years after her 2011 award; the riveting visual artist Kara Walker; and the innovative choreographer Jonah Bokaer.

Each artist receives a one-time fellowship of $50,000, to spend without restrictions. “Artists are people, and they have all the same problems other people have—paying the rent, taking care of their kids, paying off debt, et cetera—in addition to taking on a profession that is, for many people, incredibly expensive,” Haggag explains.

Haggag grew up in Brooklyn and New Jersey. She studied art history and philosophy at Rutgers University, then served as executive director of The Contemporary, a “nomadic, non-collecting art museum” in Baltimore. Haggag later earned a masters degree in curatorial practice from the Maryland Institute College of Art.

Today she enjoys living and working in Chicago, where the art forms USA supports are “very robust.” Compared to other major cities, Haggag feels, “Chicago models what more of the country feels like.”

In addition to supporting individual artists, USA is committed to serving as “a convener of sorts. We put these people in conversation with one another,” Haggag says. “At least once a year, we actually bring them all together, along with the donors we work with. So there’s this added community that’s involved, where the foundations, the individuals and the corporations that fund our awards are an active part as well.”

“It struck me that there’s a whole world out there I didn’t know anything about, that needed help.”

FREDERICK H. WADDELL

Frederick H. Waddell, chairman of the board of Northern Trust Corp., considers the venerable asset management, asset servicing and wealth management firm “very good at philanthropy.”

And he would know. During his term as chief executive officer, Waddell honed that proficiency—and proved an invaluable friend to The Chicago Community Trust.

“Throughout his tenure as CEO, he continued to make the bank’s relationship with the Trust a key priority,” says Jason Baxendale, the Trust’s chief development officer. “He has committed so much to Chicago.”

Waddell’s commitment to service began at his suburban middle school, when he volunteered to tutor kids from nearby Pittsburgh. He realized for the first time how fortunate he was.

“It struck me that there’s a whole world out there I didn’t know anything about, that needed help,” he recalls. “That was an early seed.”

In 1975, after graduating from Dartmouth College, Waddell was “fortunate enough” to get a job at Northern Trust. Waddell says that he never expected to rise as high at the Northern Trust as he has—but with his success has come an opportunity to give back.

He and his wife, Cate, have given generously to numerous organizations over the years, like the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University, where Waddell earned his MBA; the Kohl Children’s Museum, where he is board chair emeritus; and the United Way.

Waddell characterizes Northern Trust as “a culture that values giving back and taking care of people.” That commitment is reflected in their role as a trustee of The Chicago Community Trust: one of five banks that manage the Trust’s endowment, and help advise on strategic direction.

In 1989, to celebrate its 100th anniversary, Northern Trust created The Northern Trust Centennial Fund, dedicated to supporting programs that improve student learning and achievement. The bank selected The Chicago Community Trust to house the Centennial Fund and administer its grant making.

It was while Waddell sat on that Centennial Fund grant committee that he came to appreciate The Chicago Community Trust’s “focus on impact, and on being a convener of philanthropy. The Trust brings people together to address the city’s most critical needs, and its focus has never been sharper.”

The Chicago Community Trust also hosts Northern Trust’s donor advised fund program, through which the bank’s clients create charitable accounts to support philanthropy across the nation. Thanks to Waddell’s advancement of the partnership, the program now includes more than 400 funds, with over $375 million in charitable assets—advised by donors, stewarded by The Chicago Community Trust.

The program is a great solution for philanthropic families, Waddell says, because The Chicago Community Trust is attentive to accounting and reporting concerns, is strong on service and maintains a solid reputation for integrity.

And for clients who seek guidance in their giving, “The Chicago Community Trust has great expertise,” Waddell says. “Education, joblessness, gun violence—The Chicago Community Trust has policy experts in all those areas, and more. They know what are the greatest needs, and what organizations are most effective in meeting those needs.”

Waddell said he appreciates the spirit of civic partnership with which the two organizations, and many other businesses and nonprofits around Chicago, work together to make the city better for everyone.

“It’s those positive Midwestern values,” he said. “You roll up your shirtsleeves, you get in, get your hands dirty, work hard and get things done.”

The vision had always been to teach technology skills while also developing community leaders.”

Brandies Meva’a, co-owner of a digital marketing firm based in River North, recalls the experiences that led her to where she is today.

One was helping establish a nonprofit while she was in high school. An ambitious, focused straight-A student in Chicago’s West Garfield Park, Meva’a learned a lot about community organizing and leadership in the process.

Another was getting fired.

“I was a really bad receptionist,” Meva’a deadpans. The job was at a nonprofit she loved, and Meva’a spent a lot of time volunteering for their programs—but “neglecting my receptionist responsibilities.”

The firing devastated Meva’a, who felt blindsided after working so passionately for the cause. Then one morning, with three weeks left until her unemployment benefits would run out, she heard a local news segment about an internship program “that offered good paying jobs.”
And so she was introduced to Inner-City Computer Stars, a technology-based workforce development and leadership program for low-income adults. Started in 1998 by Sandee Kastrul and Leslie Beller, i.c.stars paves the way to employment for highly talented people who lack opportunities because of their socioeconomic background.

For years, The Chicago Community Trust has supported i.c.stars—including a grant from the Unity Fund, which helps restore stability for people struggling to stay afloat through services from emergency shelter to workforce training. Today i.c.stars is part of the Trust’s GO Grant program, providing general operating support over three years to help organizations continue their essential programs more stably and seamlessly.

Getting into i.c.stars’ two-year program requires a rigorous four-day application process. Out of 5,000 applicants, Meva’a was one of just 12 accepted in 2006.

At i.c.stars, she gained marketable technology skills like programming in several computer and scripting languages. And the leadership development training helped her reshape her vision for the nonprofit she’d cofounded back in high school.

When Meva’a finished her internship, she was hired as a benefits analyst for a global human resources firm. Two years into her position, the company got acquired. Meva’a packed up her belongings, severance check in hand, and hailed a cab straight back to i.c.stars.

With their support, Meva’a and fellow graduate Cristhian Romero soon started a marketing agency called Source Digital.

“The vision had always been to teach technology skills while also developing community leaders,” says Kastrul. “Brandies is a great example of someone who went through the program, worked in corporate America and then participated in an incubation period at i.c.stars as an alum where she developed a social media business with another alum.”

Meva’a and Romero successfully exited on Aug 27, 2015. “That was a big day,” she says, a smile stretching across her face. “We’re the first social enterprise business that came out of i.c.stars.”

Her goal now? To create as many jobs as possible. “We want to be the biggest employer for i.c.stars alums,” Meva’a says.
The aim is to transform the half-mile radius around transit stations into civic assets where design, development and social programs converge.

What if we could reimagine our city’s public transit stations as hubs of opportunity and equity?

That’s the commitment of Elevated Chicago, a collaborative effort to unlock the potential of the city’s train system to connect people and create equitable centers of climate resilience, health and culture.

Chicago has long been recognized as one of the nation’s most segregated cities—the result of a century of racially based disinvestment and wealth extraction. Since 1970, there are twice as many families living in either low-income or high-income neighborhoods, revealing a growing wealth gap.

These geographic divisions have left communities of color more vulnerable to climate risks, such as flooding and extreme heat, and to health risks: life expectancy in communities with high economic hardship can be more than a decade shorter than in wealthier communities.
Yet tangible signs of renewal are taking shape near transit lines. Chicago’s transportation system offers opportunities to deploy new capital, policies and programs that improve the built environment for greater climate resiliency; increase exposure to local arts and culture; and improve public health outcomes for people of color—all while retaining local businesses and residents, and building on existing community assets.

Housed at The Chicago Community Trust, which also provides financial support, Elevated Chicago was made possible through the Strong, Prosperous and Resilient Communities Challenge (SPARCC), a national initiative calling for creative solutions in the built environment that produce positive outcomes for equity, health and climate resilience. SPARCC is a partnership of Enterprise Community Partners, Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, Low Income Investment Fund and the Natural Resources Defense Council, with funding provided by the Ford Foundation, Kresge Foundation and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, among others.

This committee identified seven Chicago Transit Authority stations as priorities for investment and opportunity: 51st Street, Garfield Blvd. and 63rd/Cottage Grove stations on the Green line; the California station on the Pink line; the Kedzie-Homan station on the Blue line; and the Logan Square station on the Blue line.

The aim is to transform the half-mile radius around these stations into centers of commerce and culture—civic assets where design, development and social programs converge to create opportunity and address our deeply rooted disparities. Toward that work, the committee formed three community-led working groups in summer 2017:

- Capital and Programs, identifying ways to enhance and make more equitable the way we develop the built environment around our transit stations

- Systems Change, working with government and community leaders to advance public policy that promotes racial equity

- Knowledge Sharing, making important research, data and narratives from neighborhood voices available to partners, investors, policy makers and the public

At the same time, Elevated Chicago announced its first community grant opportunity: funding for projects to build awareness, excitement and public participation located within a half-mile of each of these centers. Through these projects and events, the partnership hopes to create two-way learning opportunities: educating residents about Elevated Chicago’s goals, while learning from residents about their own priorities, perspectives and recommendations for the communities they call home.
“We know teachers need stuff. They’re extremely creative and generous. People don’t realize that they’re the ones forming the future out of the kindness of their hearts.”

This school year, more than one-third of Chicago teachers will spend $1,000 or more on classroom supplies from their own pockets.

On May 16, Barbara Koenen and Carolyn Ottmers of Chicago Creative Reuse Exchange (CCRx) shared a meal with fellow Chicago-area artists, teachers and nonprofit professionals to discuss how their industries could collaborate to change that statistic. Their event was part of On the Table, an annual civic holiday created by The Chicago Community Trust to unite people in conversations that lead to change.

“We know teachers need stuff. They’re extremely creative and generous,” said Koenen. “People don’t realize that they’re the ones forming the future out of the kindness of their hearts, so we wanted to work directly with them, and with the Chicago Teachers Union.”

Out of their On the Table conversation, Koenen and Ottmers submitted an idea for providing teachers with classroom supplies they need to the Acting Up awards—the Trust’s micro-grant program that helps great ideas from On the Table conversations spring into reality.
Their big idea was awarded a $2,500 Acting Up award, followed later by a grant from the Chicago Teachers Union Foundation. As a result of this support, CCRx hosted the first-ever Swap Circle for Teachers at the Chicago Teachers Union headquarters.

On August 11-12, nearly 500 teachers attended the Swap Circle—gathering free supplies from a collection of donated materials valued at an estimated $50,000.

The organizers are looking ahead to see how they can make this a sustainable endeavor. "We want the Swap Circle to become an important part of Chicago’s infrastructure. We also hope to start being a convening place for people to share ideas and teach each other," says Koenen.

“We want to establish a permanent facility, long-term relationships with the business community, and with teachers and nonprofits, so everybody knows: if you need stuff, you can get it here.”

William Estrada, who teaches visual arts at Telpochcalli Elementary, led screen printing demonstrations at the event using donated supplies. “I have an infinite love for education and using art as a way to mobilize and organize our communities,” Estrada said. “I started teaching and fell in love with it—once I started teaching I couldn’t see myself doing anything else.”

“‘There’s so much waste that we produce and a lot of need for these materials,” Estrada explained. “Thinking about how to creatively repurpose materials we’re no longer using is a huge asset all of us can benefit from.”

Gathering posterboard and rolls of paper, Yvette, who teaches Parent Resources at Tonti Elementary on Chicago’s southwest side, said, “A lot of people don’t realize how much effort, time and money goes into buying resources for the classroom. Sometimes they’re hard to come by because we don’t have budgets that allow us to get those resources.”

“It’s great to see other teachers coming together and donating what they have because everyone has a little bit.” Yvette added. “It just shows you the tight-knit communities teachers have created around the idea of being creative, for the sake of our children.”

The appetite for sustainable, local food is greater than ever. Yet of the $14 billion in produce our region consumes annually, just 5% is locally grown.

That’s why Food:Land:Opportunity—a collaboration between Kinship Foundation, the private operating foundation that manages the institutional philanthropy of the Searle family, and the Trust to create a resilient local food economy that conserves land, promotes market innovation and builds wealth in communities—put out a call for ideas to expand the scale of Chicago’s local food market.

The Food to Market Challenge invited proposals from teams working across sectors that influence the supply chain. Twenty-four teams submitted potentially transformative projects, from food access to public health to workforce development.

At stake: a $500,000 award to bring the winning proposal to life.

On a rainy October night, a standing-room-only crowd gathered at the Museum of Contemporary Art to cheer on the Challenge’s five boldest, brightest ideas.
Each of the finalists won the crowd’s support, but it was up to a committee of high-profile judges to assess the pitches’ feasibility, sustainability and potential impact: Bram Bluestein, an investor in early stage food, retail and technology businesses; Joel Moore, a financial advisor with a focus in sustainable impact investing; restaurateur and master sommelier Alpana Singh; OpenTable founder Chuck Templeton; and Helene York, global director of responsible business for Compass Group at Google.

Finally, the Trust’s president and CEO Terry Mazany and Kinship Foundation vice president Renee Michaels took the podium to announce the winner—awarding Team Leverage the $500,000 prize to integrate technological innovations and existing delivery networks, creating a sustainable food supply chain from more than 100 small family farms to underserved neighborhoods in Chicago.

What was next for the Challenge winners?

Team Leverage launched their food box delivery program, using Chicago Public Schools and Evanston Township High School as delivery locations to reach surrounding neighborhoods. The team is using existing relationships with distributors to get local, sustainably raised meat into households in Chicago that previously had little to no access.

The award also helped team member This Old Farm to scale their processing operations, including technology for improved tracking—meat processed by This Old Farm can now be traced back to the individual animal.

In 2017, projects run by Team Leverage distributed more than 1,000 protein boxes, or over 11,000 pounds of meat—providing more than 46,000 meals for Chicago residents.

Meanwhile, the four other Challenge finalist teams have strengthened their partnerships and sustained their momentum. Inspired by the competition format to think big—but also to make their ideas actionable and develop concrete strategies—the finalists were able to leverage those pitches into other fundraising opportunities.

Irv Cernauskas of Team Fresh Picks Farmer Alliance is now spearheading a network of on-farm aggregation hubs. “The Challenge was a great catalyst for the formation of the Farmer Alliance,” Cernauskas says. “Articulating our vision led to a significant grant award from the USDA. That’s been huge for us.”

And the urban food hub and farmer training center pitched by Team Farm on Ogden Development is now under construction. Angela Mason, associate vice president of Windy City Harvest at Chicago Botanic garden, says, “The video and buzz created for the Challenge definitely helped galvanize interest and led, in part, to the project gaining momentum last fall.”

“We look forward to contributing to a stronger local food system in Chicago to benefit communities,” Mason says.
When Charlotte Lindon gave money to charities, there were strings attached. The strings were her heartstrings—her insistence on being involved in good works, on looking for new ways to contribute, on following up on the impact of her donations.

During her 96 years, Lindon helped children, the elderly, the blind, the developmentally disabled, start-up entrepreneurs and cancer patients.

And when she died in 2017, she left the majority of her estate to The Chicago Community Trust, ensuring a lasting legacy.

“She felt there was a need to give to people,” said her son Gary, a Chicago-area developer. “She would say to me, ‘You have enough. We need to give to other people.’”

In doing so, Lindon was carrying on a family tradition. Her grandfather was a Russian immigrant who sold dry goods from a peddler’s wagon, before opening a department store at Roosevelt and Halsted. As the store prospered, he became a major benefactor to the Orthodox Jewish Home for the Aged.

Lindon’s cousin, Jacob Bolotin, was determined to become a doctor—in spite of his blindness. He worked for years selling brushes and typewriters door-to-door to fund his education, becoming the first person born completely blind to achieve full licensing to practice medicine.

Lindon’s mother-in-law and grandfather-in-law were both blind, inspiring her passionate support for The Chicago Lighthouse.

“Charlotte was a wonderful friend of The Lighthouse,” said Jennifer E. Miller, The Chicago Lighthouse’s chief development officer. “I loved getting to know her personally as well as learning about her amazing life. She will always be missed, but we are grateful for her having the foresight to create a scholarship in perpetuity for our students in honor of her late cousin.”

Lindon would receive letters from scholarship recipients and follow their progress. “She would keep in touch,” said her son, Gary. “It wasn’t a passive thing.”

Other nonprofit groups benefitting from her generosity included the Ark, the Council for Jewish Elderly, the Jewish Council on Urban Affairs, the North Shore Senior Center, Orchard Village, the Hadley School for the Blind and Jewish Homes for the Aged.

Lindon graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Northwestern University with a bachelor’s degree in psychology in 1942, then left graduate school to do her part during World War II as a social worker with the American Red Cross. When the war ended, she earned a master’s from Roosevelt University and became a licensed clinical psychologist.

In 1979, she and her husband founded the Elick and Charlotte Lindon Foundation to organize their philanthropy. Later, they partnered with The Chicago Community Trust to make the giving process even simpler and more effective.

“I research an organization’s mission myself; but then I’m interested in the Trust’s evaluation,” Lindon said. “I want their help to identify a program so fantastic that I’m moved to make a significant gift.”

Abbe I. Temkin, director of major and planned gifts for the Trust, worked with Lindon to manage her charitable giving for the last few years of her life. “She was very deliberate with her philanthropy and incredibly generous,” Temkin said. “She had a very strong sense of purpose.”

“She was the type of person who makes this job enjoyable,” Temkin said. “She was the perfect example of someone who reminds me how lucky I am that I get to see the best in people.”
In addition, the Trust fondly remembers our friends who have recently passed away.

COMPETITIVE GRANTS

EDUCATION and ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

We believe that every child should have access to a high-quality education, including a post-secondary experience that leads to living-wage employment. Our grants support programs that help close the academic achievement gap. Build pathways from high school to future success. Reduce unemployment. Prepare workers with the job skills employers need to remain local and profitable. Fight discrimination in the workplace. Secure fair earnings for working people.

Responsive grants support specific programs and projects that serve a community need, or seize an opportunity for impact.

GO Grants provide stability for core nonprofit partners delivering services essential for thriving communities, including basic human needs, healthcare, community safety, arts and culture, economic and community development, immigration services, nonprofit sector sustainability and sustainable development.

Together, these complementary grant programs enable The Chicago Community Trust to achieve its commitment to a region where everyone can thrive.

HEALTH, HOUSING and HUMAN SERVICES

We work to improve the quality of life for all residents of our communities. Our grants support programs across the entire housing spectrum: to prevent and end homelessness; boost affordable rental housing; prevent widespread foreclosure that hollows out neighborhoods. They help keep people healthier: provide greater access to quality care, reduce chronic disease. Our grants help fight hunger with a stronger network of food pantries, meal programs and fresh produce for food deserts. They support programs reforming the justice system and reducing crime rates to make neighborhoods safer.

CIVIC and CULTURAL VITALITY

We are committed to enhancing the vibrancy of our culture in ways that promote regional prosperity and build community. Our grants infuse arts organizations with the resources to truly reflect Chicago’s diversity. To provide arts education to young people, in and out of schools. To become more sustainable, serving as enduring anchors in their neighborhoods. We support programs that make data and information more available to leaders and residents alike, providing common ground for conversation—and change.

Programmatic GO Grants are awarded to support nonprofit programs that promote cultural vitality and provide arts education.

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

We know that a sustainable region depends on building up truly sustainable communities, where development balances regard for economy, environment and equity. Our grants support nonprofits working at a systemic level—to address wide-scale issues of the built environment, climate, energy and natural systems—and at a community level—to create a cohesive landscape of livable, walkable, economically viable neighborhoods with access to employment and open space alike.

SEARLE SCHOLARS

The Searle Scholars Program was designed and created by the Searle family in 1980 to nurture creative talent in scientific research.

Since its inception, the program has been supported by the charitable lead trusts established under the wills of John G. and Francis C. Searle, which emphasize supporting research in medicine, chemistry and biological science.

The family selected The Chicago Community Trust as the organization to which it would make distributions from the Searle Family Trust to support the Searle Scholars Program. Approximately 15 percent of the funds come from the Searle Funds at The Chicago Community Trust. The other 85 percent of the funds come from the annual grants recommended by Searle family representatives and approved by the trustees of the Searle family trusts.

The program supports the independent research of outstanding early-career scientists. Each Scholar receives an award of $300,000 over a three-year term, with grants made to the Scholars’ sponsoring institutions. The program is administered by Kinship Foundation, the private operating foundation that manages the institutional philanthropy of the Searle family.

The Chicago Community Trust created the 1915 Society to honor those generous, forward-thinking donors who made a commitment to secure metropolitan Chicago’s future by including the Trust in their estate plans. Members of the 1915 Society, named for the year the Trust was founded, are ensured that their intentions will forever be translated into meaningful charitable purposes. Changing times and conditions never make these gifts obsolete. Under the capable management of the Trust, they become free endowments, adaptable to evolving circumstances.

FUND TYPES
Donors may work with the Trust to create and contribute to one or more types of funds. Donors can shape charitable gift funds to meet their specific interests and objectives by using one or all of the basic fund types as building blocks.

Advised Funds:
An advised fund may be established with a gift of $10,000 or more. It provides donors the opportunity to remain actively engaged in the grant making process. Advised funds are efficient alternatives to private foundations, may involve successor generations and may be endowed for perpetual giving.

Competitive Funds:
The Trust’s competitive funds are available to nonprofit organizations in metropolitan Chicago that serve the residents of the region. Organizations receiving support in the form of grants must have a 501(c)(3) status or fiscal agent. Competitive funds include the following:

- Field of Interest Funds: Individuals and organizations may pool their charitable gifts of any size into a common fund that addresses an issue of importance to them and to the community. Income from these funds is distributed by the Trust in accordance with each fund’s specific purpose.

- Restricted Funds: A donor may establish a fund dedicated to an area of concern to the community. These funds enable the Trust to respond to ongoing needs in specific areas.

- Unrestricted Funds: Through unrestricted funds, donors enable the Trust to respond to the community’s most pressing challenges in creative and flexible ways. These funds provide some of the Trust’s most important resources capable of addressing the ever-changing needs of the community.

Designated Funds: At the time a designated fund is established, the donor designates specific charitable organizations as the perpetual recipients of the income from the fund. The Trust ensures that the designated recipients receive support as long as they remain in existence and continue to fulfill their intended charitable purpose.

Supporting Organizations: A growing number of donors with significant charitable assets and a desire to have a more formal giving structure are establishing supporting organizations. As with advised funds, a supporting organization is an attractive alternative to a private foundation, providing significant tax benefits and grant making support through the Trust.

FINANCIAL HIGHLIGHTS

The Chicago Community Trust’s mission to improve the quality of life and prosperity of our region is achieved through the generosity of our donors. As of Sept. 30, 2017, the Trust’s consolidated assets totaled more than $2.8 billion. In addition, during the fiscal year, the Trust received new gifts totaling $383 million and made combined grant commitments totaling $323.8 million.

Our relationship with Chicago financial institutions dates back to the founding of The Chicago Community Trust and continues to be a partnership with enduring richness. In 1915, Harris Trust and Savings Bank stood as the sole trustee bank charged with managing the Trust’s charitable assets. Over time residents began assessing their own personal giving and contemplated the charitable legacy they would leave the community. Individuals turned to the banks for assistance in leaving gifts in perpetuity, and the banks, in turn, looked to the Trust as a fellow civic leader.

Today five financial institutions manage a large portion of the Trust’s assets. We are privileged to have such strong relationships with these banks and their leaders.

The Trustees Committee, comprising the five chief executives of these banks, appoints up to five members of the Executive Committee, approves other appointments to the committee and, according to the Declaration of Trust, “shall consult with and advise … in matters pertaining to the development of The Chicago Community Trust and public relations.” Following are the 2017 members of the Trustees Committee and Trustee Banks.

DONOR SERVICES
The Trust works one on one with local donors to help them manage their charitable giving, offering them several ways to give. These include setting up their own funds or contributing to existing funds. Donors with funds at the Trust are able to benefit from the expertise of the Trust’s grant making staff and the scope of our grant making.

COMMITMENTS TO OUR COMMUNITY
LEADING CHANGE: Solving the most pressing issues and responding to the big opportunities within our communities.

ENGAGING RESIDENTS: Generating new models of collaboration with one another for the common good.

INSPIRING PHILANTHROPY: Celebrating the spirit of giving by joining together to create the country’s most philanthropic region.
The Chicago Community Trust, our region’s community foundation, partners with donors to leverage their philanthropy in ways that transform lives and communities. For the past century, we have connected the generosity of donors with community needs by making grants to nonprofit organizations working to improve metropolitan Chicago. Since our founding in 1915, the Trust has awarded over $2 billion in grant funding to more than 11,000 local nonprofit organizations—including more than $300 million in 2017. Our region is home to people passionate about their neighborhoods. People committed to making a difference. People divided by a legacy of segregation, separated by lines of class and race and opportunity—but there is much more that unites us than divides us. We pledge to bridge these divisions and to champion the common good, creating a place where no one is left behind.

To learn more about how the Trust has improved the quality of life in metropolitan Chicago, we invite you to visit our website at www.cct.org.
